DiscussIT Topic 6: Where is our country headed?

Discuss IT Topic:Over the last week, our country has had growing concerns on immigration bans, border safety, and executive orders that remind us of issues that have been plaguing our country for years. Now that Trump has been elected President, there has been people threatening to blow up the White House, human right protests, and a plethora of other sensitive subject matters that are very compelling to individual groups of people. Why have these issues come up now as we head into a time in which it seems no one is going to be happy with the outcomes? Will this create a split in this country and place citizens against one another when it comes to their views? In your opinion, what other topics are at the forefront of concern? Explain...

Response: Please make sure all grammar, spelling, indentation, and punctuation is correct.

Many people don't realize that every president has their haters, people did the same when Obama was elected it just wasn't as mainstream to ridicule him as it is for Trump. I do not understand why some celebrities can say that they are going to blow up the white house and they get away with it, I feel that certain measures should be taken to prevent people from doing that. I guarantee that if a Muslim were to call in those same threats, they'd be nowhere to be found the next day.

The economy should be our main concern. That is one of the biggest reasons why Trump was chosen as president, because many Americans believe that he has a good chance of repairing our economy. In the end no one will be happy with every decision Trump makes. Or any other president for that matter, there is just no pleasing everyone. Immigration is also a big concern to be dealt with. It's much bigger than whatever Trump tweeted that night that pissed people off.
